Toshiba Announces Microsoft OCS 2007 Remote Call Control Integration With Toshiba Strata CIX VoIP Systems, Delivering Improved Communication, Collaboration, and Productivity

IRVINE, Calif.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Toshiba America Information Systems Inc., Telecommunication Systems Division (Toshiba — www.telecom.toshiba.com) today announced integration of Microsoft® Office Communications Server (OCS) 2007 Remote Call Control (RCC) capabilities with its Toshiba Strata® CIX™ family of VoIP business communication systems. It is available through Authorized Toshiba Dealers.

“In providing an integrated solution with Microsoft OCS 2007, Toshiba is delivering on its promise to expand its Unified Communications offerings by giving customers a choice in how they communicate with their Toshiba Strata CIX VoIP system,” said Brian Metherell, vice president and general manager of Toshiba America Information Systems, Telecommunication Systems Division.

With the integration, enterprise users of Toshiba’s Strata CIX family of VoIP business communication systems can Click-to-Dial from Microsoft OCS 2007 using a Toshiba Strata telephone device. It is compatible with Toshiba’s most popular IP and digital telephones as well as Toshiba’s SoftIPT® softphone. Users also gain telephony status information for other callers on the Strata CIX system, viewable from their Microsoft OCS Enhanced Presence screen.

“Voice integration between the Toshiba Strata CIX VoIP system and Microsoft OCS 2007 enable enterprise users to maximize the benefits of both applications for telephony activities, improving employee communication, collaboration and overall productivity,” added Katz Yamaguchi, product manager, Toshiba America Information Systems, Telecommunication Systems Division.
